THEATER TEAM WINS EASILY AT OCEAN VIEW

Home Run Puts Home Team Out in Front—Is Never Headed Thereafter

In a game featured by one of the longest home runs ever seen at the Ocean View ball park, the Daly City Theater baseball team continued to show great potentialities by trouncing the fast Sunnyside Athletic Club team by a score of 10 to 2.

Prior to this game, Sunnyside had won nine consecutive games.

The home run was scored by Centerfielder Tony Marovich, counting Conforti, who was on base, ahead of him, in the third inning. Tony also made a beautiful circus catch in the field.

The Theater boys took the lead in the second inning and were never headed thereafter.

"Bobo" Silvestri, on the mound for the home team, after a wobbly start bore down and pitched good ball. He struck out eleven batters and allowed only seven scattered hits to his opponents. Bobo is showing signs of developing rapidly and when he does arrive will be of great value to his team.

Other features of the game were the ejecting of the popular umpire, "Red" Stevens, from the game, Eddie Nagel's smashing triple and Johnny Salvino's great fielding and Jimmy O'Shea's throwing out of base runners who attempted to steal.

This team is looking forward to games in the future with the Daly City Eagles, and these games no doubt will justify the loyalty of the fans who enjoy real honest to goodness competition. That is what they will get when these crack ball teams meet on the diamond.

STATE BOARD OF P.-T. A. HOLDS SESSION IN L. A.

Officers From This Section Attend This Interesting Gathering

The state board of managers, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, met in the Clark Hotel, Los Angeles, July 10 and 11, with the new state president, Mrs. C. H. Turner, of Redondo Beach, in charge.

The ratification of the newly appointed chairmen was the first business of the day, so that these might attend the remainder of the sessions.

Mrs. William J. Hayes of Burlingame, past state president, and Mrs. John J. Garland, president of the seventeenth district, San Mateo County, attended the meeting.

Mrs. William J. Hayes, outgoing state president of the C. C. P.-T. A., has been appointed by the national congress as chairman of the Exceptional Child. This is the first national chairmanship in California for many years.

A board meeting of all district officers and unit presidents, seventeenth district, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, will be held in the Burlingame library Friday, July 20th, from 2 to 4 p. m., under the direction of Mrs. John J. Garland, president of the seventeenth district.

CONTROVERSIES DURING COUNTY BOARD SESSION

Differences With Reference To Number of Matters Before Supervisors

A rather acrimonious discussion was precipitated at the meeting of the County Board of Supervisors on Monday when three bids which had been submitted for the purchase by the county of a large steam shovel were opened and read.

Authority for advertising for bids was questioned by some supervisors.

Engineer James contended that he had been authorized by the board at a previous meeting to advertise for bids. This was disputed by the chairman of the board, who, during the controversy, stated:

"I will be no party to the purchase of a shovel until the road department's budget is finally adopted by the board."

James called attention of the board to the fact that "other items of expense have already been included in the budget and expended without final adoption." He specifically referred to the county's share of the maintenance costs of the National Re-employment Service office at San Mateo. It developed at the meeting that $1200 was included in the budget for this expense upon the federal government's threat to take the office from the county unless the money was forthcoming.

Two other members of the board aligned themselves with the chairman in his contention, stating they had no knowledge of any authorization to advertise for bids for this purchase having been given by the board. They maintained that nothing should be done in the matter until the tentative budget was officially adopted.

No action was definitely taken by the board at this meeting.

Three bidders on the proposed purchase were present at the meeting. The price proposed to be paid for a shovel was placed at approximately $8000.

Groceries, orders for which are issued by the San Mateo County Emergency Relief Administration may be purchased at any store in the county and no merchant can be singled out to fil lthe orders, according to an opinion presented to the board by District Attorney Scott at Monday's meeting.

Last year the supervisors passed a resolution directing that persons receiving food orders must purchase the food called for on the order at

CITY MERCHANTS ASSOCIATION MEETS

Final arrangements were made on Wednesday evening for the annual picnic and outing of the Daly City Merchants' Association. It will be held at the customary place, Oak Cove Park, near San Mateo, and the date will be one week from next Sunday. Reserve that day for a genuine good time.

The Eagles' Band will lead the parade and will play for an hour at the "Top of the Hill" before starting for the grounds. There will also be a police escort. The start will be made at 10 o'clock a. m. sharp.

As this will be a basket picnic, each family is advised to bring a well filled basket of "eats," so that there will be sufficient food for all who attend. Free coffee will be distributed and a great feed of tagliareni will be furnished by Mr. G. Bertoli of Mission street. There will be plenty to eat and drink, according to the committee, no matter how large the crowd may be in attendance.

All should bring their own cups.

Union music has been engaged for dancing. A band concert will be given on the grounds during the afternoon.

Games and races will be held and prizes will be given to the winners.

After the good of the order, a buffet luncheon was served by our good Chef Heslein, which was greatly enjoyed by all present.

Richest Period of Gold Mining Is Bound To Come In Next Few Years

By J. W. MARCHBANK
(Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work)

Salient facts in regard to the development of mining in the land to the north of us are set forth in a highly interesting manner in the July number of that ever-welcome magazine, "Gold." As the editor explains in his usual lucid way, the latest issue of the monthly "features British Columbia mining." The industry is discussed from every angle; as one of the captions truly says:

"British Columbia, Long Famed as Mining Province, Envisions Greatest Days of All Ahead for Mineral Production."

G. S. Pearson, minister of mines of the province,, points out that statistics are undoubtedly dull, but that he cannot resist calling attention to the fact that the 1933 gold production of $5,027,530, at the standard price of $20.67 an ounce, was an increase of 22.6 per cent over the 1932 output and 51.9 per cent over that of 1931.

It is also noted that producers of gold received an average of $28.60 an ounce last year, so that their total return in Canadian funds on account of gold was $6,955,716, an increase of 107.5 per cent over the returns of 1931, when the premium was small. The minister says:

"The figures show the 1933 gold production to be the highest in value in Canadian funds ever recorded in the province and established gold as the leading mineral product of British Columbia."

All authorities agree there will be a substantial increase in production for the twelve months of the present year. In 1933 there were more than 16,000 authorized prospectors in British Columbia and there are as many, probably more, this year. Large lode mines are booming as never before.

* * *

Wallace J. Laut is editor of "Gold," which, as my readers know, is published in Toronto, and he speaks right out when it comes to opportunities in the Northland. On many occasions I have maintained resources in Alaska alone are sufficient for the upkeep of at least six million people. Addressing himself to conditions in Canadian territory, Editor Laut says:

"The airplane is one great reason why the tempo of Northern development has been accelerated to its present intensity. The old fashioned, blind 'rush' may be over, because a field can be discovered and checked in a few days. Formerly it took months, and most of it was waste motion. Now he's a poor prospector who will attempt a 'dud' rush.

"The bored city mothers of the next generation, placing Fido in his bassinette, may burst into despairing wails of woe and address the world with them haunting words:

"'Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?'

And echo may answer from the rocky caverns of the North:

"'Mucking in a gold mine' or 'trying to nurse a sick plane out of Bloody Falls' or just 'I'm 'way up thar.'

"Then mother, snatching her gigolo antidote, Mr. J. Bonehead Paunch, from his sixth Glen Leavitt in the locker room, may demand of him that he use his influence with the government, the service club and the golf pro to bring back her baby to her. 'My child is working in a horrid mine.'

"Unless young Canada has been utterly grounded and inclined toward High Crookdom, sick alike of fathers who pray loudly and prey quietly and mothers who haven't faced a reality since the chauffeur hit the garbage wagon, then there is going to be a Definite Movement away from this Age of Advertised Ethics into a field where at least a man or woman can find how strong or weak he or she may be."

* * *

We learn from Richard A. Diespecker, British Columbia correspondent of "Gold," that the value of gold production in the province for the present year is estimated at $11,500,000, a "breath-taking" figure, as he terms it, when compared with the production value of recent years. The well known journalist truly says the northern country is experiencing a vital form of activity that is rebuilding a province after the most disastrous depression in history.

Mrs. Matilda Wright, of Irvington street, president of the William McKinley Circle of the Daughters of the Grand Army of the Republic, and Mrs. Minnie Seitz of San Jose avenue, attended a reception and banquet given at the Hotel Cecil in San Francisco last Saturday evening.

MEET HELD TO DISCUSS COUNTY WATER SUPPLY

Plans Outlined Looking To Future Reorganization of Present System

A number of city officials from the municipalities from Daly City to Palo Alto attended a dinner meeting at Burlingame last evening on request of Councilman William I. Farmer of the latter city.

The meeting was called for the purpose of discussion of the water supply on the peninsula and also to consider the proposed reorganization of the Pininsula Water Works Association.

The meeting developed the nature of a discussion for safeguarding the future water supply of the peninsula cities to avert a shortage. The meeting convened at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel at 6:30 p. m.

Plans were first laid at a meeting held at San Bruno, May 2 last, when the movement for reorganization of the water works association was launched and J. F. Bixby (city engineer of Palo Alto, was named temporary chairman.

At that time Nelson J. Eckart, the manager of the San Francisco water company, announced a probable cut of 10 per cent in wholesale rates to peninsula communities, effective in July. He predicted that San Francisco's $85,000,000 Hetch Hetchy system would be completed by October 1, at which time a celebration will be held centering about the mouth of the Pulgas tunnel, just west of Belmont, where he thought water would be pouring from the tunnel into Crystal Springs lakes from the great reservoirs behind O'Shaughnessy dam.

It is stated the system will ultimately have a capacity of 400,000,000 gallons per day, which would be sufficient for a population of 4,000,000 people in a metropolitan area, according to Eckart.

C. K. Killingsworth, noted geologist, had been invited to address the meeting on the subject, "Ground Water Supply—Particularly of the Peninsula Area."

ROYCE SPORTS WIN FOURTH STRAIGHT GAME

Turn Back San Anselmo in Well Played Game by Score of 8 to 3

By "Moe" Plansky

The Royce Sports baseball team journeyed to San Anselmo, Sunday afternoon, and handed the home towners there a shellacking to the tune of eight runs to three.

Jack Gertzenberg again pitched an outstanding contest, allowing the opposing team only six scattered hits. He also garnered two timely bingles.

Harry Maloney, the Royce Sports left fielder, was the individual batting star of the day, collecting four hits in five times at bat. His base hits included two triples, a double and a single. All of the blows came with men on the paths.

Pfiefer, right fielder, made the most spectacular play of the game in the sixth inning. He ran away beyond the right field foul line and gathered in a very difficult fly ball.

The team as a whole played airtight ball defensively, and offensively they solved the slants of Franchini, the San Anselmo twirler, rather easily, belting out thirteen hits.

"Mel" Dold caught his first game after a two weeks layoff and he gave a good exhibition of receiving.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

During the first five months of this year world production of silver has been 72,978,000 ounces, with Mexico contributing 29,985,000 ozs.; United States, 11,411,000 ozs., and Canada, 6,362,000 ozs.

If the same rate of production is maintained during the balance of the year, world production will approximate 174,147,000 ozs, compared with nearly 165,000,000 ozs. in 1933.

On the same basis, Mexico's output will be around 72,000,000 ozs.; U. S. 27,500,000 and Canada's 15,250,000, compared with 68,109,000 ozs., 20,955,000 ozs. and 15,201,265 ozs. respectively in 1933.

The Standard Silver-Lead Company operating the Jay Gould mine in Montana, has announced that expense of new mill construction and all mining costs are being met by operation of the 35-ton plant now on the ground. It is expected that the new mill of 100-ton capacity will be under full headway by October 1.

The Sacramento Bee recently said: Hordes of gold seekers are mining the Rogue River and its tributaries and the precious metal in ever increasing quantities is finding its way out of the hills of Southern Oregon.

Using equipment that ranges from modern dredges to a broken shovel, an improvised pick, and a rusty pan, many of the miners are finding only enough gold to buy their bread and beans, while others, with the more valuable ground and more efficient equipment, are finding the metal in substantial amounts.

Though the hills and streams of Southern Oregon have been widely known for their richness in gold since the yellow metal was first discovered in this section, it has been during the past year, with the added lure of higher prices, that men have gone in droves into the hills of Jackson and Josephine Counties to dig, wash and sweat for the precious stuff that has turned the tide for whole nations.

A few of the larger operators ship their metal to the government mint, while the smaller ones ship through the local banks.

Proof of a great increase in the gold production of Josephine County is shown in the reports of Grants Pass banks. Reports show that while a total of 2,657.07 ounces of gold were sold through these banks during the first five months of last year, there has been a total of 3,132.5 ounces sold by them for miners during the same period of 1934.

Special strikes of gold, of which there were none reported here for a period of two or three years, are partly responsible for the increased production. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burns found a $1,015 nugget at their mine near Leland in May. Dave Force reported the finding of a rich pocket from which he said approximately $4,000 was taken at his mine on Squaw Creek early in June.

DEVELOPMENT OF VALPARAISO MINE AT DOLOMI

Operations to Be Started by Interested Canadian Representatives

From a recent issue of the Alaska Miner we learn that Colonel E. J. Ryan, of Vancouver, B. C. and M. P. Olsen and J. E. Amundsen arrived at Ketchikan to examine the Valparaiso Mine at Dolomi with a view to starting developement work. The preliminary work will consist of a survey of the requirements for operations and construction of necessary buildings and installations of equipment will start within two months. It is expected that mining will be under way before the end of the year. An investment of between $50,000 and $100,000 is considered necessary to begin mining.

The company operating the mine will be the Alaska B. C. Mines American, Inc. The company was incorporated recently at Juneau and is a subsidiary of the Alaska British Columbia Limited of Canada.

Mr. Amundsen is the construction superintendent of the E. J. Ryan Construction Co. of Canada and went to Ketchikan to survey the construction needs at the mine.

The Valparaiso Mine is situated on the north shore of Paul Lake, about two miles from tidewater at Dolomi Bay and was discovered in 1898 by an Indian. The first developement work was done through the efforts of Charles Guzman, a native of Chile, who was at Ketchikan at the time. Later the property passed to the Princeton Mining and Milling Co., with B. A. Eardley as manager, and was in operation for a number of years. On the preperty is a five-stamp mill and a large Huntington mill with a combined capacity of handling forty tons of ore per day.

Water power is used to operate the mill and drill machines and additional power is available to operate the mine on a larger scale.

In the vicinity of Dolomi a number of other properties are lying idle, some having veins from two to six feet in width and traced over a distance of several claims.

The officers will be installed by Deputy Grand President Frances Maloney of Menlo Parlor No. 211.

There will be dancing and refreshments after the ceremony.

MERCHANTS PLEAD FOR HEAVY RAIN IN NEWSPAPER

An Associated Press dispatch from Roswell, New Mexico, makes the following unique announcement:

Abounding faith in newspaper advertising was evidenced by thirty-two Roswell business men when they placed with a weekly newspaper a four column display ad reading:

"Wanted—A good, soaking rain this week for Chavez County and the entire Pecos Valley."

There have been no results as yet, but the weather forecast said local thunderstorms were possible, with attendant rains. The valley has been without rain for several weeks.

Miss Celebrates Birthday

A birthday party was given, Tuesday afternoon, to twelve little girls and boys by Mildred Bernice Callaghan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Callaghan of Westlake avenue, the occasion being the celebration of the eighth birthday of the little miss.

A large birthday cake, made and decorated by Mildred's aunt, Mrs. Regis of Berkeley, was the center of attraction for the children. It was topped with eight pink candles and with blue birds, pink and blue flowers, and a large inscription, "Happy Birthday," especially delighted the children.

Candy, cake, sandwiches and colored lemonade were also served.

The afternoon was spent in playing games.

Those who enjoyed the afternoon were Patsy Moran of Berkeley, Raymon Eade, Josephine Stratman, Betty Falous, Jack Stratman, Jack Falous, Deanie Nelson, Donald Eames, Laverne Callaghan, Barbara Mendola, Armando Tarris and the little birthday girl, Mildred Bernice Callaghan.

Missing Boy Found

Ernest Huber Sr. of Rice street telephoned the police department last Friday and asked that they locate his six year old son, Ernest Jr., who, with two older companions, Buddy Doyle and Sonny Finnegan, also living on Rice street, went on a hike in the hills back of Daly City and had not returned home at dinner time.

The boys left home at 11 o'clock. At 2 o'clock the two older boys returned, stating they had lost track of their younger companion.

Several police officers headed by Chief Doyle, accompanied by A. J. Bodien, searched the hills for several hours, and at dusk found little Ernest in a deep ravine in Guadalupe Valley. The lad was returned to his anxious parents none the worse for his adventure.

CARE OF HEALTH IN HOT WEATHER

Advisable to Be Careful About Your Food.

By EDITH M. BARBER

ONCE upon a time an attack of what was known as "summer disease" was just naturally expected from time to time in hot weather. Sometimes one member of the family and sometimes the whole group would be laid low with what was known as cholera morbus. I am not sure of the spelling of this word, which has grown into disuse since attacks of indigestion, which were associated with hot weather, have become less common. Children were the worst sufferers with "cholera infantum" in days when ice was not so much in common use and when pasteurized milk was an unknown safeguard.

Today we are all better protected than we once were with supplies of clean, safe milk under city or state supervision and with refrigerators in general use. Laws which deal with the handling of food in a sanitary way are in existence and enforced to a large extent. All housekeepers have, however, a personal responsibility in making sure that all food which comes into their kitchens is in good condition in the first place and that it is in the same state when it is served. Milk bottles should be washed and all vegetables and fruits should be picked over and washed before they are put into the refrigerator, which must be kept in a spotless state.

No food which is suspected of being in the slightest degree tainted or overripe must ever be used. Don't take a chance especially in warm weather. Ptomaine poisoning, which may result from the action of certain bacteria on foods which spoil easily, may be a serious and sometimes fatal thing, and it is always painful and enervating accompanied as it is by nausea and diarrhea. It may also be acquired by eating food which is in good condition but which has been handled in an uncleanly manner, which transfers colitus bacteria to the food. If you are eating your meals outside the home, select eating places where you are reasonably sure that cleanliness is a kitchen habit.

If one of the family develops an acute attack of any digestive disturbance send for a physician at once. He will probably prescribe castor oil, which you may think you can prescribe yourself just as well. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred you would be right. It is the hundredth case, however, which is dangerous, because it may be appendicitis, for which this home remedy is dangerous. And do not give the patient calomel, that other home remedy, which is still used, although not to the extent it once was. Use instead of drugs an ice-bag to relieve pain while you are waiting for the family doctor. Both the nurse and the patient will appreciate his prompt arrival and swift directions for relief.

General rules for good health in summer are to use plenty of clean vegetables and fruits in the best condition, and to be sure that meat and milk are handled in a cleanly way, and that they are not tainted.

Mixed Vegetable Salad.

1 cup shredded cabbage
1 cup grated raw carrots
1 finely chopped onion
3 sprigs parsley, finely chopped
⅓ cup moyannaise
1 tablespoon vinegar
I tablespoon cream
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon celery salt

Have vegetables cold and crisp. Season and put all together. Serve on lettuce.

Fish Mold With Watercress.

2 tablespoons gelatine
½ cup cold water
2½ cups boiling water
½ cup lemon juice
1 pound flake fillets
1 cup sliced cucumbers
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 cup mayonnaise
Watercress
Hard boiled eggs

Soak gelatine in cold water and dissolve with boiling water. Add lemon juice and chill until it begins to thicken. Fold in the fish, mayonnaise, cucumber, onion and more seasoning and pour into mold. Chill until set, turn out on chop plate and garnish with watercress, mayonnaise and hard boiled eggs.

Cherry Tarts.

1½ cups sugar
4 tablespoons flour
2 eggs
2 cups stoned cherries
½ cup candied orange peel

Mix the sugar and flour and add the eggs, beaten slightly. Cut the cherries and orange peel into pieces and add to the first mixture. Roll pastry an eighth of an inch thick and cut into rounds three or four inches in diameter. Spread one-half of each round with the mixture, moisten, fold and press the edges together. Bake about fifteen minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit). Sprinkle with powdered sugar before serving. Instead of the candied orange peel the grated rind of one orange may be used.

Hen's Egg Measures Six by Eight Inches

Big Rapids, Mich.—C. E. Modrow and his White Leghorn hen are crowing over an egg measuring 6 inches the short way and 8 the other, which, Modrow points out, is bigger than an egg laid recently at Bridgman which did not measure more than 6 inches either way. Modrow, who lives in the Woodville district, doesn't want to boast, it is explained, but merely wants to egg on other poultry men to see what their hens can do.

Home Town Boys Have Failed to Make Good

Budapest.—In Besence, Hungary, the women have gone on a marriage strike.

For some subtle feminine reason they refuse to marry the men of the village, though they're overwhelmed with offers, there being five times as many men as women in the town.

Through sheer contrariness from the masculine point of view they have all proceeded to get "crushes" on the gentlemen of a neighboring village, where the women are in the majority.

The unfortunate Besence males have set up a law whereby no outsider contemplating marriage with a Besence girl may enter the town, nor may the native lassies leave to marry anybody in the neighboring town.

But the problem is far from being solved. The girls are locked up. The men are still lonely. And everybody is very, very unhappy.

British Graveyard Inn Sells Beer Near Church

London.—Beer can be bought—and drank—in a British graveyard. The only inn in the country, which has this unique location, will be 300 years old this year. It is the Mug house at Claines near Worcester.

Ancient, gray tombstones come within a few feet of the front door of the tavern, and the church itself is only 30 yards away.

When a villager calls for his evening pint, he must pass through the graveyard. There is no other entrance to the "pub."

At one time the church held its vestry meetings in the tap-room of the tavern, and some centuries back the church received a portion of the profits from the sale of ale in return for granting a license.

The inn was established to "provide refreshment for lords and ladies after the church service."

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

Simon Legree cracks his whip, a black man prays for the souls of white men who misuse him, and little Eva ascends to heaven under city auspices. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is playing a season right here in New York. The players are real troupers though they will not travel in a private car, or maybe two private cars, as Tom shows—so the old Clipper called them—used to do in my boyhood. They ride in the subway. The theaters are different than those of other times. They are trailers, which are towed here and there by motor trucks. Each trailer is a complete theater. On reaching the desired spot in one of the public parks, a dressing tent will be erected, the trailer unfolded and a plug inserted in a convenient electric outlet. That's all the preparation necessary. Since there are to be no parades, the troupers won't have to double in brass. But business is assured—all tickets are free.

* * *

There are five of the trailer-theaters, each complete in itself. Thirty feet long, they are 8 feet wide and 13 feet high—the dimensions being governed by the city ordinance covering that kind of vehicles. When unfolded, there is a stage 30 by 20 feet with footlights, back-drops, borders, scenery, properties and everything else necessary. A switchboard in front controls the lighting. The stage crew consists of an electrician, a property man, a fly man and a carpenter. The idea of a municipal moving theater came from the brain of George Junkin, head of the drama department of the city public works division. Cleon Throckmorton designed the trailers, donated the idea to the city and supervised the building in his Greenwich Village workshop. The actors have been selected from among the many unemployed Thespians. Their salaries come from welfare funds.

* * *

Looking back, I discover I have overlooked the dressing tent. To protect the theater from the elements, each trailer is covered with a canvas. When that canvas is taken off, it is set up as a dressing tent. The Tom shows won't compete with theaters and movies since tickets will be distributed by welfare agencies among families who have no money for amusements.

* * *

By no means is "Uncle Tom's Cabin" the only throwback to the gas-light era. For quite some time, "The Drunkard," first presented here many years ago by P. T. Barnum, has been flourishing in an old church on East Fifty-fifth street, the patrons drinking beer while witnessing the performances. Then, too, Mr. Throckmorton is directing a restoration of the Peoples theater down on the Bowery for a revival of "The Black Crook." There will be bars and tables so that patrons may have their beer along with art, and Nita Naldi, star of the old silent screen, will appear in black tights and Ann Pennington will show her knees. In addition, there is revival of the old Bowery amateur night at the Casino de Paree. "You furnish the vegetables and we furnish the actors," say the ads. That has stirred up the Actors' Protective association so there may be a change.

* * *

Will have to go down and see "The Black Crook." The night it played in our town, I wasn't in my regular seat at Dickson's Grand opera house—there was a home order that I dare not disobey. "The Black Crook" was a leg show and leg shows weren't for young male eyes. A friend—he looked older than his years—sneaked into the gallery and rendered a lurid report. So, after all these years, I have an opportunity to check up on him.

The cost ranges from 20 to 40 cents a pound. There is said to be only one source of supply for diamond-back terrapin, and that's away downtown, with prices running into real money.

How It Started

By Jean Newton

A "Dumb-bell"

IT IS a slang adaptation to describe a very stupid person, the analogy of course being obvious, that has brought into daily usage the word dumb-bell, the name of the wooden weights which are used in gymnastic exercises.

Why "dumb-bell?" we are asked.

The answer lies in the fact that the original dumb-bell or dumbell was an apparatus contrived like that for ringing bells—that is a heavy flywheel with a weight attached which was set in motion like a church bell until it acquired enough impetus to carry the gymnast up and down and so bring his muscles into active play. One of these unique contraptions may be seen today, we learn, at New College, Oxford.

BLIND DATES

DEAR Mrs. Post: Will you tell me whether I was prudish in my point of view and whether you think I am just missing a lot of good times, which could otherwise be mine. This is what happened: A short while ago, before college reopened, my college roommate was going out with her boy friend to an evening cabaret. We both live in Chicago. Her mother did not want her to go to a late dance with the boy alone. So she asked me to go with them and they had a blind date for me, with a friend of his. He was not especially interesting and only a fair dancer but we had a pleasant evening. I wouldn't care if I never saw him again—but then, too, I would just as soon go out with him again if there was no one else who offered. A few evenings ago this boy called up and said he had a friend from St. Paul, a young business man who was the finest kind of man and coming to Chicago for two days, and that he had made a "blind" date for me with the St. Paul man to take me out for dinner and go to dance afterwards. He himself couldn't go out with us because he is on the football squad. He said the St. Paul man would call for me at seven o'clock and that I would have a wonderful time.

I don't know why I behaved as I did. I could not help it. I told him that having my time engaged for me to go out with a total stranger was not my idea of a wonderful time, and that nothing would induce me to make that kind of a blind date, and that I was not a taxi dancer, and then I hung up.

Now, of course, everything is all wrong. We are back in college, my roommate will hardly speak to me because her boy friend is angry because I was rude to his friend. Finally, my roommate said she would leave it to you to decide who was right and who was wrong.

Answer: It seems to me that you were right. It was entirely proper to go out with your roommate and her friend and whoever they might have invited to make a fourth. But to have gone out with the St. Paul man, as coolly arranged for you by a practical stranger, or in fact to go out alone with any man you did not know—unless under very extenuating circumstances—would have been extremely cheap. At the same time you may have been rude in the way you refused to be a taxi dancer. This depends on whether your voice was amiably casual, or angry. So you see?

NAMES

DEAR Mrs. Post: I was named for my father, who died when I was very young. For more than twenty-five years I have continued to use John Smith, Jr., as my name. I know that I am John Smith and should write my name without junior suffixed to it. But my father achieved some prominence and I hesitate to take his name even now. Please write your opinion of my case.

Answer: I think you yourself have given the only opinion there is to give. Actually you are now John Smith, but I have no idea whether the laws of your own state would compel you to sign your name or engrave your visiting cards or even to change your bank signature. I do happen to know of a number of men who for one reason or another continued to call themselves junior long after the death of their fathers. I also know of others, who, during their fathers' lives, have taken off the name junior by adding middle names. Apparently a man considers his name is his own to do with as he likes. But whether he has the legal right to make these changes, I don't know.

* * *

Dear Mrs. Post: Should an unmarried woman register in a hotel as Carol Jones or Miss Carol Jones? If miss is included, is it written as an undivided part of her name?

Answer: She writes Miss Carol Jones exactly as in addressing an envelope. She puts miss in parenthesis in front of her signature at the end of a letter to a stranger who does not know whether she is Miss or Mrs., or in your particular case, Mr.

* * *

My dear Mrs. Post: What should the young children at our school be taught to call a handy man whose duties also include driving the bus which brings them to and takes them from school every day? He is not a young man and we don't want them to be disrespectful to him, and yet don't know whether we should expect the children to say "Mr. Jones" or not?

Answer: I think it depends upon what you call him. If he is Silas to you, the chances are the children will call him Silas, too. You can, of course, make a point of it and tell them that it is polite to call him Mr. because of his age.

Reduction In Racing "Take" Logical Step By This State

By J. W. MARCHBANK

In glancing over a well reasoned statement against onerous taxation on mines the other day I happened upon a few lines that apply perfectly to the present situation in California in regard to tolls on racing. The writer, H. S. Denny, an authority on monetary affairs, said:

"The idea that has to be deeply ingrained into the minds of men who are responsible for the revenues of the country, is that the INDIRECT profits from a lightly taxed industry are liable to be many times greater than the the direct profits from greedy direct taxation."

Just as mining men of vision are opposed to any form of taxation that will deter capital from being invested for the development of the mineral resources of a country, so broadminded sportsmen are frimly convinced taxation on racing should be kept within reasonable limits.

Mining laws are adapted to encourage the coming of capital, so racing statutes should be of a kind to draw thousands of men and women to the state. The sportspeople will bring money and that money will add almost immeasurably to the wealth of California.

At present, four per cent of the commission on the pari-mutuel pools at the state's race tracks is abstracted for the state government. With eight per cent going to the racing association, the total—twelve per cent—is altogether too steep. The twelve must be cut down, by action at the coming session of the state Legislature, to nine per cent. Then we'll be in a position to attract tourists of means throughout the year, as we'll have sport that can not be surpassed anywhere.

From the pen of Samuel O. Dunn we glean this bit of wisdom: "We need many reforms . . . but with production, which is the source of all incomes, still about 40 per cent less than in 1929, what we need most of all is a renewal of private initiative and private investment, a consequent restoration of normal production and employment."

The Public Utilities Fortnightly reports that "in 1933 there were 95,000 miles of manufactured gas and 160,000 miles of natural gas transmission and distribution mains—a total of 255,000 miles of mains."

Prosperous Mines

It is not an exaggeration to say that leaders of the metal mining industry feel more encouraged than for some years past.

There are strong movements on foot throughout the civilized world to rehabilitate silver, in the interest of stimulated international commerce and general world recovery. Reports from the industries manufacturing mining equipment indicate that the mines are preparing for heavy increases in production. In brief, the stage is set for a genuine mining revival.

Prosperous mines are great employers. They are great taxpayers. They distribute large sums to investors in all walks of life. They create new purchasing power, that extends through agriculture, the professions, all industries. They are one of the three basic industries, and their revival is essential to our future.

You Pay A Sales Tax

In a recent referendum the voters of the state of Oregon decisively defeated a proposal for a general sales tax.

By doing so, the Oregon electorate followed an example of a number of other states and communities.

However, if the voters think they have eliminated the sales tax they are badly mistaken. They are paying a sales tax now. They have been paying one in the past. They will pay one in the future.

The corner grocery where you buy your food pays taxes. The concerns which produce his stock likewise pay taxes—heavy ones. Those taxes are necessarily passed on to the consumer as part of the selling price.

That is true of everything you buy—gasoline or entertainment or food or clothes. Part of every dollar you spend goes for taxes—and the proportion mounts constantly. The fact that the tax is not apparent means nothing—an indirect tax can be every bit as expensive as a direct one.

The great lesson the people of the United States must learn is that no one can escape taxes—and that exorbitant cost of government threatens our jobs, our savings, our property. When that fact is really implanted in the public mind, there may be inaugurated a campaign for tax reduction that will accomplish results.

Rebuilding The Money Structure

In a recent article in a new York newspaper, Walter Lippmann, one of the best known of American economists, says that the most effective instrument of recovery has been the monetary policy, rather than efforts designed to stimulate purchasing power through industrial regulation.

Mr. Lippmann thus adds his voice to those of other economists, both here and abroad, who believe that well-considered changes in the money systems of the great powers are necessary, both in aiding recovery and in achieving stability afterwards. Before long a number of international conferences will probably be held on the general subject of "What Shall We Do About Money?"—and the results achieved will have a great bearing on the future prosperity of all the peoples of the world.

CHRONOLOGY OF MONTH OF JULY

Interesting Facts Regarding Present Twelfth of the Year Period

July, the month of Julius, is the seventh month of the year according to the modern calendar. The earliest Roman calendar made it the fifth month and gave it the name of Quintilis, which means fifth, but it had the honor to be the birth month of the good Julius Caesar, and when his calendar reform went into effect it was rechristened for him. Previous to Caesar's time it had but thirty days, but in pride he added an extra day, to give it the same length as the longest month.

The special flower of July is the water lily and its gem is the ruby.

Its Character—Summer begins in June, but reaches its full maturity in July, which in the North temperate regions is likely to be the hottest month of the year. Usually, however, the heat is not so oppressive as it is earlier or later in the summer, for in most localities the air is rather dry and clear. Under the burning sun the grass and leaves begin to lose the freshness and greenness of June and in the absence of rain the fields are often burned quite brown by the last of the month. Flowers thrive, however, and many of the most brilliant are in their prime. Roses have not yet gone and the poppies, the dahlias, the sweet peas and the nasturtiums are in full bloom. The air is full of the hum of insects, birds dart everywhere in search of food and over wayside flowers butterflies hover. All in all, it is a season of abundant life and, if he chooses, the child released from school can learn more of nature in this one month than in several months of formal nature study in the classroom.

Special Days—Both Canada and the United States have days for very special observance in July. Canada celebrates the first of the month as Dominion Day, the day on which the Confederation Act went into effect. In the United States July 4 is observed as Independence Day in memory of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, in which the colonies announced their withdrawal from the sovereignty of Great Britain. The French honor July 14 as the anniversary of the fall of the Bastile and on some days of this celebration hundreds of prisoners have been pardoned and released. Three presidents of the United States died on July 4—Jefferson and John Adams in 1820 and Monroe in 1831.

Popular Sonnet—

When the heat like a mist veil floats,
And the poppies flame in the rye,
And the silver note in the streamlet's throat
Has softened almost to a sigh—
It is July.

MRS. O'LEARY'S COW

The recent disastrous fire in the Chicago stock yards, says a late issue of the Labor Clarion, prompts J. L. Brown, veteran resident of Daly City, to send us a copy of some verses published in a New York newspaper on the occasion of the death of Mrs. O'Leary, whose famous cow was held responsible for causing the Chicago fire in 1871, in which practically the whole city was destroyed. Incidentally, he says, the poem was the first copy to be put in type by his son, who was afterward a member of Typographical Union No. 21 until his death in 1906 at Redding.

J. L. Brown is himself a member. The verses follow:

Dead is Mrs. O'Leary,
Dead in Chicago now.
Gone to join the angels,
Gone to meet her cow.

Cow that is ever famous,
More than heart could desire,
All because she started
The great Chicago fire.

Dead is Mrs. O'Leary,
Gone to the sweet bye and bye,
Go build her a monument of granite,
A hundred stories high.

PRESIDENT ASKS UNITED EFFORT IN TRAFFIC SAFETY

Calls Upon All Automobile Clubs to Aid in Efforts Reduce Accident Toll

Recognition that organized motorists present a powerful force which is working constantly for the improvement of traffic safety conditions was offered by President Roosevelt in his message to the recent convention of the American Automobile Association at Washington, D. C. This is the significance attributed to the President's utterance in a statement by the Public Safety Department of the California State Automobile Association. The statement points out that the message was in effect addressed to all A.A.A. affiliated clubs, of which the California association is the largest.

Expressing concern over the increasing toll of traffic accidents and emphasizing that leadership in solving the problem lies largely with organized motorists, the President's message said:

"I am deeply concerned over the staggering toll of deaths, injuries and heavy property damage caused by highway accidents. We cannot afford longer to temporize with this problem. Those who use the highways must realize the responsibility they assume when they take the wheel.

"Safer conditions of travel undoubtedly would contribute to greater use of the highways, now that shorter working hours and more leisure time are assured by the national recovery program.

"It is to such organizations as the American Automobile Association that we look for leadership in the continuing effort to work out a solution of the accident problem.

"You are to be congratulated on what you have accomplished in the past and on the broad-guaged program you are formulating for the future."

The convention went on record in support of a comprehensive program of action by organized motorists to deal with every phase of the traffic accident problem, including uniform motor vehicle laws, highway engineering, law enforcement, and traffic safety education. Resolutions were adopted calling for strict enforcement of motor laws, with particular regard to intoxicated, hit-and-run, and reckless drivers.

Did You Ever Stop to Think

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

That if a state is to march ahead, it must have modern roads.

States are judged by the type of roads they have.

Good roads are a distinct asset. Business cannot advance satisfactorily without them.

Good roads are a standing advertisement for a state. The better they are, the greater their drawing power.

Good roads are a great factor in the development of a state. They stimulate business and bring many new residents to a state.

Good roads develop convention and tourist business, which brings much business to the state as a whole.

States with good roads have little trouble in developing a peppy spirit, which makes a better state.

Business cannot increase or advance to any extent in states where the roads are not modern and sufficient to render the necessary service required.

The state of California has good roads, and that is ONE of the reasons why this state is forging ahead in every way.

THE SYMBOL OF HAPPIER DAYS

The mighty machine set up by the American people, under NRA guidance, to carry our homeland forward to the shining goal of permanent economic security for all, is now running on all eight cylinders.

The vital wheels and cogs of that machine are the more than 400 NRA codes of fair competition, under which 96 per cent of the country's industry is now operating.

The new Blue Eagle, distribution of which began May first, is both the symbol and the guardian of the machinery designed to make economic democracy a reality in America—to make the depression from which the National Recovery Administration is lifting us the last in the nation's history.

What we hope to impress upon you is the stupendous significance of the new Blue Eagle to each of you—as individuals. That significance is the same, whether you think of yourself as a consumer, as a salaried man or as the head of a business enterprise.

For the special Blue Eagle is, first and foremost, the emblem of national solidarity in the greatest effort ever made to make business a fair and square game. It is the symbol of the happier homeland to be builded with NRA aid—the harbinger of the day when employer, labor and the public will be full and equal partners in the operation of America's mighty industrial machine. It is the honored seal placed by Uncle Sam on the business establishment which is complying 100 per cent with the code governing the industry of which it is a part.

A distinctive Blue Eagle in the window of a store, factory or office means that every man and woman behind that window is marching in step with the times. That he or she is either paying or receiving fair wages—working fair hours and, therefore, fairly sharing the available work with their fellow men. The new insignia on a piece of merchandise means that fair practices have been observed in the making and marketing of it—that it is being offered you at a fair price, consistent with a fair profit.

Wherever you see a new Blue Eagle you know that people are working wholeheartedly with the National Recovery Administration in its effort to place a full pay envelope in every home in the land—to banish the fear of want from American minds forever—that the firm displaying it has united with other members of the same industry to complete the work of national recovery by stamping out unfair practices and methods of competition—that it has enlisted in the nationwide drive to outlaw exploitation of any individual or group in the country.

Would not any man refusing to subscribe to those high social ideals instantly be condemned before the tribunal of public opinion as an enemy to progress, as a traitor to humanity? And is it not eminently just, therefore, that the regulations governing use of this emblem of co-operation with the National Recovery Administration should be stringent, and that the might of the United States government should stand behind them?

Those regulations are strict. They state that "any person may be publicly deprived of the right to display any Blue Eagle or other NRA insignia if he violates any provision or the spirit or intent of any code, Presidential agreement or regulation duly prescribed or approved." Moreover, the right to continued display of the new Blue Eagle depends upon continued compliance.

To make certain that no chiseler shall ever be able to shelter under the wings of the special Blue Eagle, the emblem remains the sole property of the United States government. Only government agencies have the legal right to issue the individual Blue Eagle. When the emblem has been officially issued, the business establishment entitled to its use naturally has the right to have any number of reproductions of its individual insignia made for display purposes.

Fourteen Months of NRA

The President's Re-employment Agreement was the first step in the National Recovery Administration's program.

This voluntary agreement between the President and the employers of the nation to spread work and raise wages has already resulted in the re-employment of three million workers, and has already added three billions of dollars to the country's payrolls.

During this time industry was devoting itself to the business of setting up its own codes of self government, and of providing for administration of these codes. For 96 per cent of all industry, in terms of volume of business and number of workers employed, this has been accomplished. Approximately 400 codes have been approved and put into operation. The plan of self government of industry is now an accomplished fact. The codes which industry has drawn up for its government are binding on both employers and workers.

Employers may well be proud of the part they are playing in the creation of this new democracy. Putting aside the selfish interests of any special group, they have joined together to prevent abuses and extravagant trade practices. The majority have deplored these conditions for years, but none individually could do very much about it.

By adoption of the codes of fair competition, representatives of 400 industries have effected an agreement by their respective industries, based on a law of the United States, that at least a decent minimum wage be paid to every worker.

By the codifying of industry it is mandatory that no man shall work more than the maximum number of house provided by the code for his industry; that no man shall earn less than the minimum wage stipulated; that workers have the right to organize and to bargain as a group if they so desire; that child labor and sweat shop labor shall cease to be; that rules of fair practice shall govern competition between members in each industry; that the code, a common agreement of employers, is binding on all members of the industry. And members of industry have set up their own code authorities to take over the responsibility of administering their codes and securing compliance.

The soundness of judgment which impelled the vast majority of business men to support this plan is borne out, even in this short time, by the encouraging increase in industry throughout the country.

Retail trade employment, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, increased 22.1 per cent this March over last March. Factory employment is up 37 per cent; factory payrolls are up 71.5 per cent. Department stores sales increased 46 per cent; freight carloadings 31.2 per cent. The production of minerals, manufacturing, automobiles, iron and steel is up 35 per cent to 168 per cent. Exports are up 53.6 per cent. Commercial failures have decreased 43.4 per cent, and liabilities in these failures were $27,228,000, as compared with $48,500,000 in March, 1933.

Who says there is no poetry in statistics? To millions these concrete symbols have the beat of a marching song—the beat of men marching forward in unison to a better future.

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Some Little Known Matters That Should Prove of General Interest

Question: How old is the Dominion of Canada?

Answer: In March 1867 Parliament passed the British North America Act, providing for a union of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick to comprise the Dominion of Canada.

* * *

Question: How long did the Spanish American War last?

Answer: From April 24, to December 10, 1898.

* * *

Question: In what state will be found the widest diversity of surface features?

Answer: The vast state of California.

* * *

Question: Of what technical assistance are spiders to astronomers?

Answer: Many astronomical photographs require several hours' exposure and all this time an observer must sit with his eye to a parallel telescope, making whatever minute adjustments are necessary. At the end of his instrument is a cross made of spider's web, which is much finer and smoother than hair; at the start a star is formed exactly at the center of the cross and if it appears at any time to move the slightest distance in any direction the observer brings it back by an adjustment.

Question: What are the comparative nutritive values of banana flour and wheat flour?

Answer: One pound of banana flour is equal in nourishment to two pounds of wheat flour.

Question: What is the highest waterfall in the world?

Answer: One named Takkalaw, in British Columbia; height 1200 feet.

Contrast this picture with that black day in March of last year, when the banks closed and the world stopped. At that time a magazine graphically described the general state of mind. The streets were crowded with people wandering aimlessly about, it said. Had any man broken into a run, all the rest would have followed him, thinking he knew where he was going.

Yet, though they did not know, then, where they were going, Americans revealed their real character. During those dark days food, clothing, shelter, were supplied on credit by countless merchants. Men who had any cash shared it with those who had none. A spirit of generosity and faith prevailed. The faith in every heart expressed itself in bucking up the next man and lending him a helping hand.

Out of this spirit of faith and co-operation the NRA was born. In this spirit, industry has banded together to achieve more permanent security. The means for accomplishing this have been set up. Much remains to be done, of course. We are by no means out of the woods. But the people themselves have set up the machinery by which we can get out.

In the words of President Roosevelt: "The methods and details of . . . reorganization may and will change from year to year; but it is very certain that the American people understand that the purpose of the reorganization must be permanent for all the rest of our lives . . ."

FAMED JUDGES FOR LOCAL HORSE SHOW

Horse show judges who are famous throughout the United States will come to California next month to tie ribbons and award the trophies and cash prizes to the more than 400 stars of the tanbark ring gathered for the annual competition at the eight annual San Mateo County National Horse Show. The show will be held from August 6 to 12 at the Menlo Circus Club in Atherton.

Announcement has been made by Mrs. W. P. Roth, president of the show, that Claude Pemberton of Elizabethtown, Kentucky; Miss Nola Minton of Barbourville, Kentucky, and Major E. G. Cullum of Mineola, New York, have accepted invitations to do the judging of three and five-gaited saddle horses, harness horses and ponies, hunters and jumpers.

Miss Minton is a member of the famous family who for years owned the largfiest stables of saddle horses in America. She is regarded as one of the foremost experts in America on saddle horses and will judge three and five-gaited saddle horses and fine harness horses. A fine harness horse is a five-gaited saddle horse shown in light or fine harness and driven to a light vehicle.

Major E. G. Cullum is considered one of the outstanding American show judges, and his services are more sought after than any other horse authority in America, Mrs. Roth said. He will judge the harness division and roadsters at the show.

The stock horse division will be judged by a Californian—Dr. R. R. Root of Livermore, who has judged in many shows and is identified with some of the largest stock ranches in the state.

Some of the greatest show horses in the world will parade before these arbiters of equine supremacy at the show this year, said Mrs. Roth.

Many stables from the East, as well as from California and Pacific Coast states, will come to the peninsula show with world champion steeds.

Slow in Low Gear

Automobile motors are often injured by the driver attempting to drive too fast in low gear before shifting to a higher gear, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. It is only necessary to get the car moving before shifting to second and, except in the newer cars with fast second gears, fifteen miles per hour in second is fast enough before shifting to high.

Hard Starting

When the motor is hard to start or runs unevenly, inspect the breaker points in the distributor, suggests the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. The points should be clean and the gap should be as recommended by the manufacturer. Wear may cause the adjustment to change and occasional inspection is advisable.

Use Brake, Not Clutch

Use of the clutch with the motor running to hold the car on an upgrade when stopped by traffic is an injurious practice, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. The clutch should be released entirely and the car held with the brakes.

GRADE CROSSING PERIL IS SAFETY EFFORT SUBJECT

With the vacation and summer travel season in full swing, and many motorists driving new and unfamiliar routes, there is increased danger of railroad grade crossing accidents. This is emphasized in a statement by the Public Safety Department of the California State Automobile Association. The motorists organization has launched a program of educational activities for the month of July in an effort to impress drivers with the need for care in approaching and traversing railway crossings.

Attention is being directed by the Automobile Association to the fact that state law requires motorists to observe certain rules of safety in approaching and traversing highway and railroad intersections. One section of the law is quoted as follows:

"Whenever any person driving a vehicle approaches a highway and interurban electric or steam railway grade crossing, and a human flagman or clearly visible electrical or mechanical signal gives warning of the immediate approach of a railway train or car, it shall be unlawful for the driver to fail to bring the vehicle to a complete stop within fifty feet, but not less than ten feet, of the nearest railway tracks before traversing the grade crossing. It shall be unlawful for the driver to traverse a grade crossing when a flagman continues to give a signal of the approach of a railway train or car."

The law also limits the speed of vehicles to fifteen miles per hour while passing over any railway grade crossing where the driver's view is obstructed. A driver's view is deemed to be obstructed when, at any time during the last 100 feet of his approach to the crossing, he does not have a clear and uninterrupted view of the crossing and of traffic on the railway for 400 feet in both directions.

Another suggestion for grade crossing safety is to shift to second or low gear before passing over the tracks in order to lessen the chance of becoming stalled in the path of a train.

Sluggish Starter

When the starter appears to be sluggish although the battery is fully charged, clean and tighten the battery terminals, examine the generator and starter wire connections, and clean the commutator and replace worn out brushes, is a suggestion by the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

Among the many persons who have attained high distinction in a calling they did not like is Admiral William S. Sims, retired, one of the ablest Naval officers of his generation. He has spent forty-two of his seventy-five years at sea, yet he says: "The sea is fine when viewed from the shore, but I never liked to go to sea."

SYNOPSIS

On her way to a faculty position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer meets a young man, Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy. At the railroad station they meet Mrs. Denver, engaged as matron. At the school the group is struck by an air of mystery pervading the place. Gordon Haskell, proprietor, welcomes them. Wilton Payne completes the Academy faculty. In a schoolroom Janet finds a group, which the teachers had supposed were scholars, are really highly artistic wax figures.

She peered through the glass door into the hall. No one there! But some one might be watching and waiting for her exit—to spring upon her, or to follow her with their eyes up the curved staircase. To be seen and not to see was dreadful. She crossed the hall as if great weights were on each foot and the pursuers would soon be upon her. Up she climbed, and for a moment stood in the moonlight that streamed through a window at the head of the stairs. Then realizing that this was a conspicuous position, she moved on to the shadow—just as voices reached her from below. One of them was Haskell's, and he was saying in a sharp whisper: "Take those horrible figures down in the basement, Balder. If you ever dare play a trick like that again, I'll horsewhip you."

Peering over the banisters she saw the "gorilla man" enter the schoolroom. Haskell stood guard, but he seemed to shrink back against the wall as his servitor emerged with one of the wax figures under his arm. He carried it nonchalantly, as Janet had seen such figures in department stores carried about, and returned after a time for the others.

She did not wait to see these transfers, but went quickly down the corridor, and, seeing a light under Mrs. Denver's door, she spoke her name softly, and was at once admitted.

The good woman was in a heavy flannel dressing gown and slippers. Her eyes looked as if she had not slept.

"I've been downstairs. I felt I must know what kind of a place we are in."

"Did you see anything?"

"Those four scholars were still in the school room studying!"

"Oh, the cruel man!"

"No, they are wax figures."

"Wax figures! Why, that's dreadful! Do you think he means to murder us?" she added inconsequentially.

"What object would he have in murdering strangers? No! there's something here less simple than killing innocent people."

"Then there are no scholars?"

"Only four wax ones—so far. Mrs. Denver, are you willing to see it through? After all, we really know nothing; it's strange—but strange things are not always criminal. Let's see it through."

"I agree with you. I was never one for running away. My dear, you had better try to get some sleep."

"I intend to."

She stole back to her room. The house lay now in profound silence, but still she had the uncanny sensation that the quiet veiled a sinister activity. Speculating on this, she fell asleep.

She was awakened next morning by a faint tap at her door; then a voice: "Miss Mercer, may I see you as soon as possible?"

She recognized it as Arthur Fleming's. "Yes, in about a quarter of an hour."

"I'll be waiting at the end of the passage."

When she joined him he stood by a window in the morning light with "Hamlet," who seemed deep in his musings. He and Arthur both looked at her curiously.

"Well—how do you feel about it now?" Arthur asked.

"Why do you ask?"

"Payne and I are wondering if we ought to let you stay on here."

"You really think there's danger?"

"Yes."

"What kind?"

"That's just it," Payne remarked; "we don't know. I hate to use a misused word, but I am what is called psychic; or at least I am sensitive enough to scent a sort of menace in this house."

"The gods of destiny are here," she said. "Listen to my adventure." She told them the story of her visit to the schoolroom.

"Ah, you shouldn't have gone down there—it was dangerous," Payne said gravely. "You should have asked me—I saw at once that the figures were wax."

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"Why alarm you?—but Fleming and I talked half the night about it."

"Do you remember what the old farmer said—that it would be easier to come here than to get away! What did he mean?"

Payne shook his head. "There's something queer about the place that he knows and we don't."

"We'll have to talk this over later," Arthur said, looking at his watch. "Let us stop at Mrs. Denver's door, and, if she's ready, go downstairs together."

Janet knocked. "Mrs. Denver," she said gently. There was no answer. They knocked louder—a draught from the windows, perhaps swung the door; it softly opened. They had a glimpse of a made-up bed, of an orderly small collection of toilet articles on the bureau; of a neat black bag at the foot of the bed, but the occupant of the room was not there.

"Let us go down, too," Payne said "It's a quarter to eight. I should think hungry pupils would be waiting breakfast."

The silence reigning over the great house was profound.

"Really," Arthur remarked, "this is getting on my nerves."

They descended the main staircase and stood uncertainly in the hall; then Janet looked through the glass door of the study room. The figures were absent.

"Ah, breakfast?"

Turning they saw their principal, with a fresh flower in his buttonhole and an air of amiable concern for their health. "Did you sleep well? The first night in a new place is always trying. Miss Mercer, you look somewhat pale. A cup of coffee I prescribe for you—at once."

He led them to a really bright and pretty breakfast room flooded with the morning sunshine. The white paneled walls and bright chintzes were like a guarantee of normality. Even Wilton began to wonder if they had not been over-excited. Steaming coffee, scrambled eggs, muffins, marmalade and fruit were on the breakfast table, hot plates and spirit lamps keeping the cooked food at a point of perfection. They found they were very hungry.

Midway of the meal, Janet put down her fork with a sudden realization. "Oh, where is Mrs. Denver—has she breakfasted?"

"Long ago! She is a very soldier, that little woman; I foresee reveille at six, taps at nine. Mr. Wilton Payne, more coffee? Have you in your psychological studies tabulated the effects of caffeine and other drugs upon human conduct—for example, the actions of the same person on a day begun without coffee? Personally I should not be responsible for my actions on a day initiated without this wonderful coffee bean! More eggs, Miss Mercer?"

They were all feeling better; half ashamed of their suspicions. Only Payne was narrowing his eyes a little as if over a problem. Janet wondered what kind of a girl he would eventually marry; and she pictured one with quiet eyes and a still manner beneath which the keen-eyed Payne could not readily see. And Arthur? His dominance would search for a creature equally strong.

"Are all new teachers favored with breakfast with the principal on the first morning?" she ventured to ask. "Where is the general dining-room of the faculty?"

"Oh, Miss Mercer, we are the faculty—we cozy four. I am a linguist, a historian, I've delved deep into the ancient ramifications of the unfolding spirit of man. You teach English literature and rhetoric; my good friend, Wilton Payne, psychology; Arthur Fleming, mathematics and chemistry. Are not all the arts and sciences, at least by proxy, represented?"

"Of course, with receptive pupils four teachers can do wonders," Arthur commented. "But we are very anxious to meet our pupils!"

"You speak of pupils, Mr. Fleming. In this respect also the academy is ahead of the times. What would you consider the most important element in education?"

Arthur reflected for a moment, quite intent on the honesty of his own answer regardless of consequences. His clear gray eyes looked out on the wild and rugged hills as if in their profoundly purple depths he could read the royal rule of all instructions. "I should say, sir, development of character—the making of splendid citizens."

"And you, Miss Mercer?"

Her smile had the fleeting, lovely quality of a wood nymph pausing to answer an intruder from a dead and settled world. "I should say all education should make people more enchanting and—enchanted."

As she uttered the words her eyes met Arthur's in one of those glances between two young people which are like a dissolving scene in the theater. Almost they held their breath with the wonder of it. They were to be here together through the long autumn days, hidden from the world with an extraordinary chief, and education turned perhaps into real magic—the education of the heart—as well as the head.

"Enchanting—and enchanted," the schoolmaster repeated. "Ah! you show your own theory in yourself, Miss Mercer. Now Payne?"

"Education—a drawing forth of the soul—educe; lead forth. How shy souls are!"

"I congratulate myself on my discernment in choosing three young people of such advanced views in education. Now, has anyone any objection to teaching a handful of day scholars who come from the neighboring farms? It is a most beautiful charity, I assure you; for the young things belong, as a rule, to families too poor to send them to high school or colleges; and they are avidly eager for an education."

Dance in Enchanting Sheer Cottons

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THAN the new dainty and exquisite cotton sheers what lovelier, we ask you, for the summer dance frock? Silence gives consent and we agree with that cotton sheers of the present day are just too delectable for words.

Just because the new cottons are so adorable and because youth knows a good thing when it sees it, this season's debutantes as well as an endless procession of "sweet girl graduates" together with countless of their sorority sisters have all taken to wearing sheer and flattering airy-fairy fluttering cotton weaves to their formals, their summer dances and other festive occasions in preference to any of the more gorgeous, costly and sophisticated textures you might offer them.

Of course the winsome gowns illustrated need no argument in their favor. They speak for themselves. However, a little data as to color and specific detail may not come amiss. For instance we think it adds to the glory of the enchanting gown on the enchanting creature seated, to know that the crisp, cool organdie which fashions it adopts a two-tone color scheme which is as lovely and fresh and happy looking as gay young daffodils in springtime. A dancing, prancing balloon motif patterns this organdie. You will love the little nosegay of wee yellow velvet flowers which adorns this frock and the girdle of wide yellow velvet ribbon which enhances it. The petal sleeves are likewise a most beguiling feminine detail.

And her dainty white shoes! Please to take special notice, for they tell one so definitely what's what in the matter of footwear to go with daintiest of summer frocks do these evening sandals of white kid which are perforated in so unusual a design.

We have a feeling that your eyes have been straying in the direction of the perfectly charming print evening gown centered in the group and so we will tell you all about it. Seeing it, you realize instantly why sheer cottons are the rage this season. There is romance in this gown. The fine quality cotton voile which fashions it (called plume chiffon in fashion's text-book) is young-looking, smart as can be, washes like a charm and is, therefore, always ready for the next party. Here, again, we see a sash of wide velvet ribbon, for you must know accents of velvet on a sheer summer frock is a style message which comes straight from headquarters. A cluster of ruffles at the back of the skirt lend animation.

And the girlish unsophisticated little gown to the right in the picture, it bespeaks youth personified. Crossbar organdie fashions it, and you may vision it in the color you like best with white, although we do not hesitate to tell you that in fresh spring green and white it is certainly a cool, refreshing and inspiring sight.

Speaking of organdies, you really must not fail to acquire a three-quarter length loose coat of white organdie which must be that transparent the patterning of the flowery dress will be sure to show through this diaphanous wrap. You can easily make one of these jackets although they are not at all an expensive proposition when it comes to buying ready made. All you have to do is to get a simple pattern of a swagger coat or one semi-fitted if you prefer, cut it out of organdie, seam it up (French seams for a neat finish) and then instead of hemming, to preserve the sheerness, finish with a wee piping or cording of its own organdie.

SMART SANDALS IN LEAD OVER PUMPS

Shoes are better looking than ever, and women who have worn pumps for years are deserting this type of shoe in favor of smart sandals and other models. Indispensable for the summer is the shoe of white buckskin with brown calf trim. One model has three straps that slip into one large clasp. A crash linen shoe has square perforations, with large holes marking the pattern. Nice for dancing is a shoe made entirely of loose, narrow strips of shell-pink kid with a blue kid lining. Then there is a sky-blue kid slipper with lining of palest pink. A silver and black Chinese ribbon sandal would be delightful with filmy black evening clothes.

Rubber Swimming Suit Like Flowered Chintz

Rubber swim suits will fool you unless you know your rubber fashion, for the cheekiest bit of magic comes in a swim ensemble of printed rubber that looks like flowered chintz. The hat, slippers, and suit all match and can be bought for an amazingly small sum.

Taffeta Petticoats

Mme. Agnes, whose hats top some of the smartest Parisian coiffures, has designed a frock with a crisp, light petticoat showing nearly an inch below the hem. It's of hyacinth blue taffeta and is worn with a simple navy blue wool dress.

Dinner Suits in Paris

Dinner suits, originally designed for American women, have captured the fancy of smart Parisiennes. The newest show plain dark skirts with printed crepe jumpers and jackets.

Taffeta Black Slacks

Black taffeta has no notion of disappearing with the summer sun. Instead, designers are making use of it for beach slacks, of all things! White terry tops complete the costume.

GREENAWAY FROCKS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Back to Kate Greenaway styles swings the pendulum of little-girl fashions. The dainty flower-sprigged organdie frock pictured revives those happy features which characterized the quaint and picturesque Greenaway styles of the long ago. The short waist, the full, longer skirt, the little puffed sleeves, the frilled necklines and the ribbon threaded through beading at the empire waistline are all typical of this cunning mode. The skirt is fulled on with a deep ruffled "heading." The hat is of the same material as the dress.

SUSPICION

By R. K. WILKINSON

©, Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

THERE was no real cause for it. None other than that strange, unexplainable inner voice that is a woman's intuition.

Anne just began to sense the feeling of suspicion when Gregg announced he would have to stay at the office at least one night a week.

"It's the depression," he told her. "We've had to let a lot of the boys go. Working overtime to fill in the gap."

Anne fought the feeling, and yet it persisted.

Why? She couldn't find an answer.

Certainly Gregg had changed none in his attitude toward her.

He was the same always—loving and kind and devoted.

He'd been that way for two years.

Two years of blissful, unbelievable happiness—as far as Anne was concerned.

Suspicion is the instigator of jealousy.

It gnaws at one's soul.

It is like a malignant disease.

Time stimulates its growth.

When one is suspicious of one's husband one is apt to brood rather than confide.

Hence there was no relief, no escape from the torment.

* * *

At the end of two months Anne found herself the victim of mental torture.

Her diet was affected.

She lay awake nights wondering if Gregg really was working late every Wednesday night, conjuring up pictures of how he spent his lunch hours, visualizing him keeping secret rendezvous.

She tried mightily to cast the thing from her mind.

Not a single instant did she entertain the idea of accusing Gregg.

The thought of doing so, only to discover her fears unfounded, struck terror to her heart.

Nor did she consider trying to entrap him.

She shuddered at thoughts of sinking so low as to sneak out and spy on him.

Her love was greater than that.

And yet when, a few days later, her closest friend, Helen Browning, said in a jocular way:

"Saw that perfect husband of yours out riding with a rather attractive girl last night," it was as if Anne had been waiting for and expecting the announcement.

She had all she could do to keep her nerves under control, to return Helen's light, merry grin with a forced laugh and a bit of repartee.

So it was true?

Gregg was carrying on an affair with another woman!

No, not Gregg!

Not dear, kind, devoted Gregg!

Not the Gregg whom she adored and worshiped and loved more dearly with each passing day.

Impossible!

* * *

Anne brushed the mist before her eyes and laughed.

It wasn't true. It couldn't be.

There was some explanation for it. And yet—

It was Wednesday night and when Gregg came in the hour was past 12.

He looked wretchedly tired and miserable.

Anne lay with a book in her hand and pretended to read while he prepared for bed.

"These late hours are knocking me for a loop." He took off one shoe, yawned, stretched.

"Had to take the stenog. home. You'd think a stenog. would have sense enough to live within walking distance of her job."

Anne became rigid.

Stenographer.

Anne remembered the girl. A blonde!

It would have to be a blonde!

Sleek and young and in a cheap sort of way beautiful!

But shallow, like most girls who pound typwriters and chew gum.

Anne waited a week.

She was going to give Gregg every opportunity to come to her, to be honest and fair about the whole thing.

She waited a week because there was the bare possibility that she had been mistaken, that it was all a product of imagination.

And during the week she waited Anne tried to perceive in her husband some change, some noticeable difference in his demeanor that would betray his deceit.

But Gregg remained the same.

He looked tired and worn.

His features revealed the strain of hard work, and more than once he mentioned that if the present pace continued to be maintained at the office, he'd be a physical wreck.

* * *

Anne found herself wishing that it was work and work only that was responsible for his condition.

She wanted to believe he was telling the truth, and perhaps would have succeeded had not the germ of suspicion taken such a firm hold upon her soul.

And so when Wednesday the following week came around Anne found herself no nearer a solution.

And, acting on an impulse born of desperation, she decided to throw all sense of pride and honor to the winds.

The thing must be settled once and for all.

At nine o'clock Wednesday evening Anne called her husband's office on the 'phone, asked if she might speak to Gregg, and upon hearing his voice over the wire, hung up the receiver without speaking a word.

So far so good.

It was now 9:05.

Anne backed her own roadster from the garage and drove down town and parked at a spot which commanded a view of the front door of Gregg's office building.

* * *

Hardly had she switched off the ignition when her heart gave a bound.

A blue coupe, with chromium covered tire racks mounted on either running board, had just pulled away from the opposite curb.

There were two people in the car, a man and a woman.

The man was Gregg!

There was no mistaking it.

The blue coupe with the chromium tire covers was his. There was no mistaking this, either.

Anne sat as if stunned.

Now that she had actually seen with her own eyes, the revelation was more of a blow than she had anticipated.

The shock of it had a sort of numbing effect.

She sat still for five minutes. Gradually her tensed muscles relaxed. She moved automatically, started the car, guiding it through traffic toward home.

Home!

The thought sickened her, tore at her heart.

Gregg—untrue! Incredible!

Yet she had seen . . . Well, it was best she knew, best that the thing was settled.

Now she could conduct herself with some definite plan of action in mind.

Of course she'd have to leave Gregg. This was inevitable.

The parting would be hard.

She pictured his looking at her. That would be harder still—meeting his eyes, which had always been so twinkly and wholly lovable.

* * *

Anne told herself she still loved him. Hers was the kind of love that went on and on.

It would never end.

Yet it would be easier not seeing him . . .

She left her roadster beside the house.

It would be best to leave tonight.

Perhaps before Gregg got home.

No, that wouldn't do.

She'd pack first, then wait to face him.

The house was deathly still.

It was always still and lonesome feeling without Gregg there.

It always would be.

Anne's lips were grim.

There was a strange calm about her, a determination in her expression.

She hoped that the feeling of strength which had come to comfort her would last until the thing was done.

Anne snapped on her dressing table light and began to gather things into a little pile.

For one brief moment she thought of Gregg and almost gave in to the ache in her heart.

Then something happened—

Another light snapped on.

Anne turned.

Gregg was sitting up in bed, rubbing his eyes, trying to adjust a sleep-drugged mind to what was happening.

"Gregg!"

"Huh?—oh, hello, Anne. Sorry I dropped off before you came in. Couldn't help it. . . . Too much work . . . Dead tired . . . I had to quit early tonight."

He lay back.

"Dumb cluck of a stenog tried to make me drive her all the way home. I dropped her at Fifth street. . . . Get a bus there."

His voice faded.

He closed his eyes, breathing heavily in sleep.

Once he roused, brushed a hand across his cheek with a little gesture of impatience.

For even in slumber the sensation caused by hot tears splashing down on one's face is disturbing.

Buckwheat, Asiatic Product

Buckwheat, says a Chicago scientist, is not considered a grain at all by botanists but is a near relative of the common smartweed. It was first grown as a cultivated crop in the high plateaus of Tibet about 2,000 years ago and was not only used as a food but the Tibetans concocted a drink from it resembling our own beer. China and Manchuria took up its cultivation and traders introduced it to Europe sometime during the Fifteenth century. It made its first appearance in America about 100 years after the first English colonies were founded. Its cereal products and buckwheat cakes have become so desirable that now the United States raises about 9,000,000 bushels annually.—Pathfinder Magazine.

The Island of Napoleon

Elba, the Island of Napoleon, is the largest island in the Tuscan archipelago and forms part of the province of Leghorn. While its real fame attaches to Napoleon, its material fame is in its wealthy iron ores, its climate and fertile soil. During its history, Elba has involved the Saracens, the people of Barbary, the Pisans, the Genoese, French, English and Spaniards in warfare. Today it is part of the kingdom of Italy. The villa of San Martino, an unpretentious building, was altered by Napoleon as a residence for himself, but today there is nothing left of the furniture of his time independent stores. This action was taken at the request of the San Mateo County Retail Grocers' Association and was designed to favor the independents over chain stores.

SUPERVISORS HOLD SESSION

It was decided that in future the purchases may be made at the discretion of the person receiving the order, according to the opinion of the district attorney. He stated this was the policy of state and national relief administrations.

George J. Davis, chairman of the National Re-employment Service, appeared at the session and warned the board that unless the county would pay $100 per month towar dthe maintenance of the office, these forces would be consolidated with the San Francisco office and that San Mateo County workers would lose their chances of getting relief work if this action is taken.

"Every county project must secure its workers through this office," the board was told by Davis, "and we must ask the partial assistance of the county in this matter. We want $100 per month or we will move the office to San Francisco. Then it is possible that San Mateo County relief workers will not be favored with employment."

Davis had previously stated that San Mateo was the only county in the state which was not contributing toward the upkeep of the important emergency relief office.

He also indicated that numerous PWA projects are on the verge of being started in the county.

Supporting Davis' plea for these funds were a number of officials of various municipalities in the county as well as a number of citizens who attended the meeting.

After Davis and the others had concluded, County Executive Kellogg announced that "he had included an item of $1200 in the budget to care for the request."

Threat of court action against the county was made by Attorney A. P. Black, who said he represented several property owners whose agricultural lands had been included in the Montara Lighting District. He presented a petition for a rehearing on inclusion of these lands.

He charged illegal discrimination in inclusion of the lands and cited a supreme court decision rendered in 1916 in which that body held that no agricultural lands could be included in lighting districts within this state. The Cowell estate, holdings of which are located in the section involved, filed the original complaint which culminated in the appearance of the attorney before the board on Monday.

The board adopted a proposal to appropriate $500 to be placed in the budget for the repair of streets in the Millbrae Villa section.

Meeting as a board of equalization, the supervisors heard protests from several Montara property owners against lighting district assessments.

Donald Morrison, 16, of 247 Sagamore street, San Francisco, was arrested about 8 o'clock Saturday evening by a local police officer as he was driving away with an automobile from the parking lot at the Daly City Theater.

After questioning the young man wsa given into custody of the juvenile authorities at Redwood City, where he was placed in the detention home.

His trial was set for July 16.

Mrs. Charlotte Shanley, of Bridgeport, Conn., seems to be no longer pleasing to her husband, according to a statement made by her when applying for a divorce, which was granted. She declared that Mr. Shanley begged her for half an hour to commit suicide and obligingly offered to turn on the gas for her.

COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

Note: This is a weekly report from the San Mateo County Department of Public Health and Welfare, giving facts of importanec for health protection and a list of all contagious diseases reported to the County Health Officer in the previous week, as required by law.

(The following letter from the Director of Health is self explanatory.—Editor.)

Department of Public Health and Welfare, San Mateo County.

July 10, 1934.

To the Editor:

It is with great regret that we are forced to announce the discontinuance of the articles which have accompanied our weekly morbidity reports to the papers for the past six months.

This is due solely to the fact that our personnel has been drastically cut under the new budget. The removal of our deputy health officer and one clerk has resulted in our being swamped with routine work. We will be nuable to continue this public health education feature, and cannot even attempt to start various sanitation projects which are nrgently needed throughout the county.

We are enclosing a copy of our organization chart which shows the unique functions grouped under the Director of Health and Welfare. You will note that the director is not only health officer, but is the responsible administrative head of the Community Hospital and the county charities (Social Service Division).

With our main office staff reduced to one physician (Director), one public health nurse, and one clerk (secretary,) we cannot claim to have even one full time health officer or public health clerical worker in this county, since much of our time is devoted to correspondence and administrative matters not related to public health.

Very truly yours,
HAROLD E. MORRISON, M.D.,
Director.

Again the irony of fate is seen in the death of an aviator through asphyxiation in a bathroom. The incident illustrates the fact that when things go right one is safe anywhere, but when they go wrong he is safe nowhere.

W. H. Clay Is Candidate for Justice of the Peace

It is well known and recognized among lawyers that some of the most intricate and perplexing questions of law arise in the minor courts, such as the Municipal and Justices' Courts of California. The proper solution of such questions of law is of most vital importance to those engaged in litigation to recover their rights or have redress for wrongs. The administration of justice in such courts, as in all courts, should be entrusted only to those whose learning and experience in the law qualifies them for the office.

W. H. Clay, of Daly City, is a candidate for the office of Justice of the Peace of the First Township of San Mateo County at the primary election to be held August 28, 1934. His reputation for honesty and integrity is well known, and if elected he will bring to the office the experience of over twenty-five years active practice of law in all the courts of the State of California, and in the United States District Courts.—Adv.

MOTORCYCLE AND AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Anna Schrader, 417 Los Sanbres street, San Francisco, and Hans Zimmerman, 529 Seventh avenue, were injured when the motorcycle on which they were riding was struck by an automobile driven by James Lombard, also of San Francisco, Sunday night at 8:45 o'clock on the El Camino Real highway near the union gas station in Colma.

He and Gerhard Uhlig, who was a passenger in his car, were uninjured in the crash.

Miss Schrader and Zimmerman received treatment at the Villa Sanitarium for cuts and bruises.
